1893.

As time enhances the value of all records in proportion to the increasing necessity for refreshing the memory say :

Let the record be carefully made of the people and things seen each day, lest they pass out of the memory to-morrow, and are lost. Then perpetuate them, not in the mind, it may forget ; not upon wood or stone, that crumble to dust, but upon paper, chronicled in characters and words that endure for ever.

By carefully recording what you see and do each day, and checking off each building or department as inspected you will be able to do the Fair systematically and with great saving of time, labor and expense, and the results will be much more satisfactory.

This becomes more apparent each day one visits the Fair, which covers 1,037 acres, 160 acres being covered by World's Fair Buildings proper, not counting the various state and foreign buildings, that cover 40 to 50 acres, or more, making a grand total of over 200 acres ; many of the buildings are two or more stories high, so that you have a grand total of nearly 400 acres of floor space.

Every nook and corner of this, not reserved for passage ways, is occupied by exhibits of the finest variety, and specimens of products that can be gathered from the art gallery, the work-shop, the factory, the press, the kitchen, the garden, the farm, the forest, the earth, the mountain, the stream, and the sea ; by all nations of the earth, with their people, manners and customs, to behold and comprehend.

As your time will undoubtedly be limited the best results can be obtained only by keeping a careful record of each day's work, and to this end we publish this memorandum or record book, hoping it may be found useful and convenient to all.

ALL FRIENDS MEET AT THE FAIR.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

Copyrighted 1893

The courts of King Solomon, with all their orient splendor would not equal a glance at the great white city, the "World's Columbian Exposition." The grandeur of the glistening white palaces, temples of art and science, overflowing with wonders of human ingenuity; the enormous size of the beautiful structures that greet the eye from every point of vantage as you approach the Fair, on a bright summer's day, with the mild, refreshing breezes blowing from off the beautiful blue waters of Lake Michigan; with the flags of every nation waving their gorgeous colors in the bright sunlight, and thousands of gay streamers floating joyously on the undulating waves of the pure air; with the constant splashing of the oars of the Venetian Gondoliers in holiday attire, Electric Launches skimming briskly about on the placid waters of the lakes and lagoons, with the air filled with charming music from many bands, the choicest of all lands, scattered about the grounds; all these things combine into a scene unparalleled.

Then note the thousands of people, of every nation on the globe, speaking all languages, and displaying their varied manners and customs; note also the magic effects of the electrical displays on a delightful summer evening, and you will wonder if it is possible that this has all been brought about by the efforts of man, or is it in reality Paradise produced by magic power?

Of those who have had an opportunity to behold these mystic beauties, the greatest wonder is, how any person of even moderate intelligence can resist the temptation to enjoy, to drink in the glories of the greatest sight that is, has been, or is likely to be for many years to come. Alas, words utterly fail to convey more than a faint outline of the grandeur and magnificence one beholds, on visiting this superb city of wonders, where days and months may be profitably spent in studying the works of the greatest artizans of the world. Those who fail to see it will regret it to the end of the journey of life. Do not allow yourself to be one of those that come too late, or fail to see the Fair.

W. E. DIBBLE.

Bunker Hill to Chicago,

.....By

ELOISE O. RANDALL RICHBERG.

Is a charming story from start to finish. "Between the lines" of this pretty tale for leisure hours, the reader catches frequent glimpses of the serious side of human life, with its neglected opportunities and its unlooked for temptations.

The story being true to life and character, is a vivid pen picture of many persons met daily ; everyone finding something in it that just fits into some of the chapters of his own story, as read by his observing neighbors.

Pardon our attempt to define the story, you may prefer to read it ; if so, your book-seller or news-dealer will be pleased to accomodate you with a copy in Paper in exchange for 50 cents, or Cloth Binding, $1.00.

334 Dearborn Street, = CHICAGO.

THE CHICAGO MASSACRE OF 1812.

William Wells, John Kinzie, John Whistler, Nathan Heald, Rebekah Wells Heald, Margaret Helm—these names should be household words in Chicago and the whole Northwest. All were pioneers and nearly all were Indian fighters; many were wounded and some were killed on Saturday, August 15th, 1812.

The story of The Chicago Massacre of 1812, is full of savage war, gentle love and stirring adventure; and yet it is only a simple, homely, narrative history of real people and actual events; telling how our predecessors toiled, loved and married, fought, bled and died; scores of them, men, women and children perishing on that dreadful day, their blood staining the soil whereon we tread.

The Chicago Massacre of 1812, by Joseph Kirkland, with illustrations and historical documents, is for sale by all booksellers and newsdealers, at 50 cents in paper, $1.00 in cloth.
